OUR STORY...

Historically, Paddington was a small agricultural village in the district of Marylebone, kept alive & prosperous by its proximity to Regent's canal.

In Saxon times it was given to the Abbey of Westminster by King Edgar & remained the property of the curacy for many hundreds of years. As time and progress marched on, the industrial revolution brought the railway to Paddington along with new money & commercial growth for the area. This huge development required space & lots of it, so The Great Western Railway approached the church asking if they could buy the land where you now sit. The good people of the church said yes allowing the railway to acquire the land for a nominal fee.

So now to the story of our name...clearly the bishop who authorised the sale must have been crazy to do so, knowing the future value of the land, hence the "Mad Bishop." As for the Bear...well you know who he is, he comes from Peru & likes marmalade sandwiches, we think he would be rather partial to our marmalade baked ham as well!
